I am using this, & using a function removeLastTmpFile() to do it. But in Ubuntu I am not able to remove the txt file & hence when I try to run the code I get an error : [Errno 2] No such file or directory: 'TMPFILE.txt' In Windows I am able to delete the file but I am not able to delete it in ubuntu. //Sample Code: //Set directory DIR *dir = opendir("."); //Read File FILE *fp = fopen("TMPFILE.txt","r"); // Loop to process all files in a directory while(fscanf(fp, "%s", fileName)!= EOF) { //printf("%s",fileName); //Remove the file name removeLastTmpFile(fileName); } A: Your function has a wrong definition. When you call the function, you pass the complete filename with path and everything as an argument. Your function is supposed to accept the file name without the path in the file system or in memory and then output the file name with path/TMPFILE.txt I'm posting an example which solves your issue. #include #include #include #include std::string removeLastTmpFile(const std::string& fileName) { std::string fileNameWithoutPath = fileName.substr(0, fileName.rfind("/") + 1); std::string outputName; if (fileName.size() > 0) { outputName = fileNameWithoutPath + "/TMPFILE.txt"; } else { //Converting "." to "/" for removeLastTmpFile function. outputName = "/TMPFILE.txt"; } int n = fileNameWithoutPath.find(".txt"); if (n != std::string::npos) { fileNameWithoutPath.erase(n); } if (fileNameWithoutPath.length 570a42141b
