So let's look at your exception....

[CrossCoreException (0x8011002d)]
System.OutOfMemoryException: Cannot allocate memory - one of the arguments is a copy of the null string. at System.ThrowHelper
.ThrowOutOfMemoryException() at System.String.Clone() at Neo.Core.Resources.
CSV.CSVReader.GetFirstRecordAsList(Int32 expectedRowCount) at Neo.Core.Resources.C SV.CSVReader..ctor(String filename) So the problem is you're trying to read the file using a loop. That's obviously going to exhaust some amount of memory. There's some real down and dirty code available on the net that does this, and it relies on `string.Empty` to indicate the end of the file. But `string.Empty` is a static member of the `String` class, so it'll just create the same instance over and over. Which will likely cause a bit of thrashing as the string is released and re-allocated to the same instance. If you really want to get a stack trace, try this:
