I have only seen images of trains in magazines, but never in real life. The first thing that caught my eye was the bright green color. It seemed rather odd to see a train with such a bright color. I don't know if the color is meant to be more prominent than that of the rest of the train or if it is just added to make the trains look that much more attractive. Also, I noticed that the roofs of the train were not constructed entirely from steel. These roofs look like they are made up of a mixture of a metal roof and a transparent roof. This just gives the impression of a train with an open front. The bottom part of the train does look like it is made entirely of steel though. Overall, the train looked very smooth and appeared to be very well maintained. I would love to travel on this train on my next vacation to India.
